

Enterprise Level Document

Definition: A document not associated with any clinical program. For example, validation documents are needed for systems such as IVRS and EDC applications, but these systems may be used for a number of clinical programs.

Example – Validation documents for an IT system, such as an Electronic Data Capture are Enterprise Level Documents

Enterprise documents can be associated with study items in any study.